Team building

Team building

Team building is the process of turning a group of individual contributing employees into a cohesive team—a group of people organised to work together to meet the needs of their customers by accomplishing their purpose and goals.

Why does team building work?

Often the team leader or manager will facilitate a series of meetings at which employees get to know each other and develop cohesive working relationships.

Virtual team building

'Teamwork begins by building trust. And the only way to do that is to overcome our need for invulnerability.'

Patrick Lencioni

Virtual team building

Virtual team building exercises can help build rapport, improve communication, and increase co-workers' understanding of one another's strengths and weaknesses. They can also reduce feelings of isolation, and drive a sense of community and shared understanding.

Importance of virtual team building

Teams can find it difficult to build rapport when they never meet 'in real life.' But developing good working relationships is important for individuals to feel able to communicate openly, solve problems, and collaborate well.
